Thailand, the Land of Smiles, is a nation with a long history of over 1000 years. Before Bangkok, Sukhothai, Ayutthaya and Thonburi were sucessively the capitals of the country.

Ayutthaya used to be a flourishing and prosperous capital in the past. It was the capital for 417 years, and during this long period there arose a great deal of construction, among them were numerous palaces and temples. As more than 30 monarches ruled over Ayutthaya, innumerable events occurred, some of which were historically recorded, while others became exciting legends, still narrated nowadays. The ruined temples and palaces either naturally worn out by time or destroyed by wars, were no doubt the valuable ancient sites, a perfect reflection of golden and legendary glorious past.

You are regarded by River Sun Cruise Co.,Ltd. as a lucky tourist who has a chance to visit Thailand. Hence we would highly recommend you to participate in the so-called tour of Retraced Epoch, in order that you will have a close touch with reality, living mode of the common people, and enjoy a pure nature. All these can be achieved by a one-day excursion which is both informative and impressively delightful.

For your comfort, the tour is divided into two parts namely:

Wat Mahathat

Wat Nah Phra Mane

Vihara Phra Mongkol Bopit

Bang Pa-in Palace

MORNING

Leave Bangkok by air-conditioned coach to Ayutthaya. Drive pass the lush green paddy fields alternated with growing industrial areas. Upon arrival in Ayutthaya, you will be thrilled by the trace of bygone glory and grandeur of our former capital. There are teeming ruins of palaces, temples and pagodas.

Wat Mahathat - This temple is over 600 years old dating back from 14th century Its pagoda once contained the holy relic of the Lord Buddha. The present ruin would serve as a mirror for a clear retrospection into the old days.

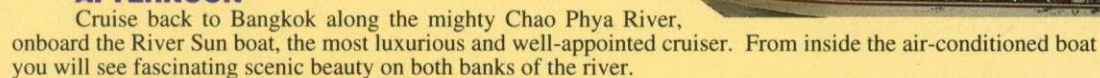

Wat Nah Phra Mane - A good sample of early Ayutthaya architectural style. Inside the monastery, there stands a rare Buddha image wearing the royal attire. Another Buddha image of green stone is more than 1000 years old. There are just a few of such a gorgeous Buddha worldwide. Perhaps it is quite interesting to note that why this temple was selected twice as commanding headquarters by the intruding Burmese armies when they attacked Ayutthaya.

Vihara Phra Mongkol Bopit - This temple houses the largest bronze Buddha image in Thailand. Very surprising indeed to see how the people in those days could manage to build such a gigantic Buddha without the help of our modern-day devices.

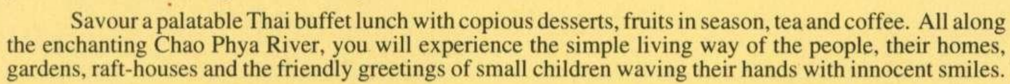

Bang Pa-In Palace - It was the favourite summer resort for Thai kings from Ayutthaya to Rattanakosin time. Various royal halls were beautifully restored and decorated with a great variety of nice flower plants. The halls themselves are in diverse architectural designs including Thai, European and Chinese, for example, the exquisite Vehaschamroon hall, the superb Aisawan Thiphaya-Art pavilion.

To be profoundly touched by the inscription of King Rama V mourning over the sudden death of his most beloved consort, Queen Sunantha.

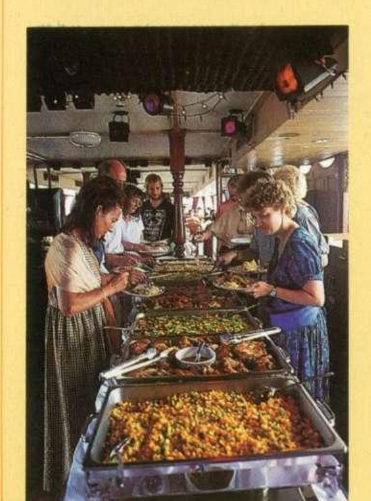

AFTERNOON

Cruise back to Bangkok along the mighty Chao Phya River, onboard the River Sun boat, the most luxurious and well-appointed cruiser. From inside the air-conditioned boat you will see fascinating scenic beauty on both banks of the river.

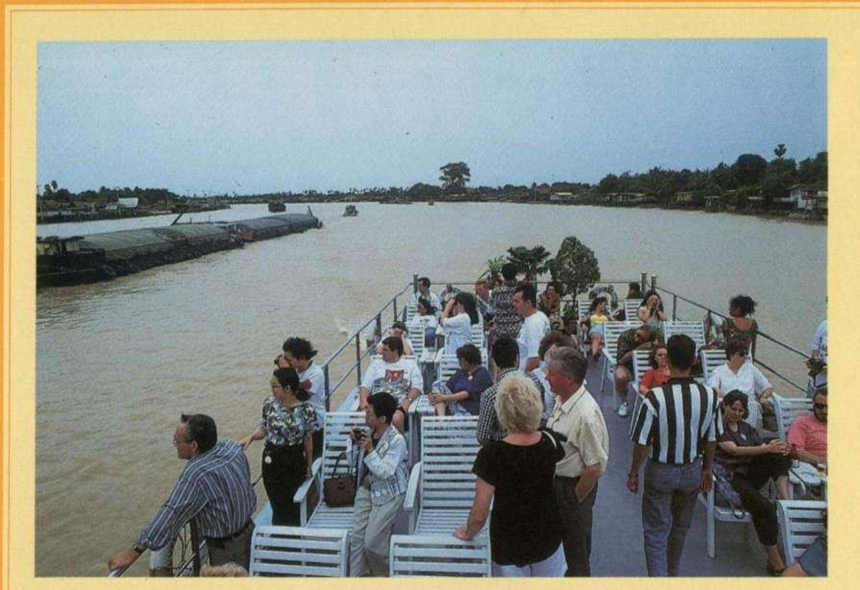

Savour a palatable Thai buffet lunch with copious desserts, fruits in season, tea and coffee. All along the enchanting Chao Phya River, you will experience the simple living way of the people, their homes, gardens, raft-houses and the friendly greetings of small children waving their hands with innocent smiles.

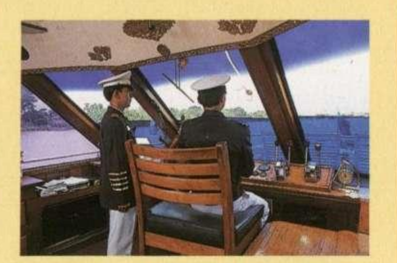

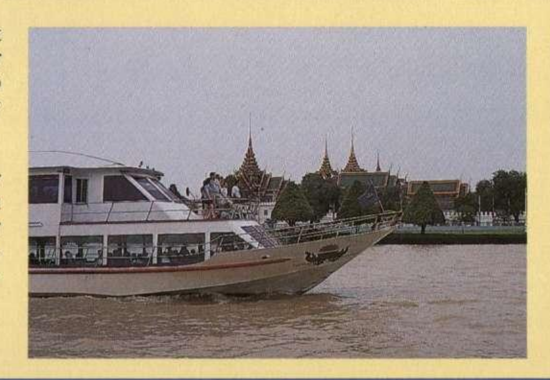

Once entering into the Bangkok city sphere, the pleasant countryside atmosphere will gradually fade away, and in its place, the glossy corporate structures. Nevertheless, plentiful popular tourist attractions can still be sighted when the boat passes near by the Royal Barge shed, the splendid Grand Palace dazzling under the bright sun, the magnificent Temple of Dawn with its tall pagoda elaborately adorned by pieces of colourful broken ceramics from China. At different corners on the River Sun deck, the most captivating pictures can be snapped.

Throughout the journey by coach and boat, there are numerous accounts and distinct sceneries the eyes can catch. All these are to be recounted by an expert guide who will put the whole story together from the past up to the present date.

Undoubtedly, the conclusion of a voyage is not merely to see, but what really counts is the impression you have had, and related it to your intimate friends at home. This would be the highest pride for our River Sun staff who stood a chance to serve you and made your trip memorably worthwhile.

It goes without saying that a near or distant journey always needs a first step, and your first step is the details. For additional particulars and necessary information, please contact your representative or your travel agent.
